Viruses have been the object of intense study in recent years. Viruses are parasites, that is to say, they prey on larger plants and animals, whose bodies they invade. They may attack anything from bacteria upwards, but each virus is very particular about the type of host it chooses to dwell in and about the type of host cell it is going to invade. Thus for example, the virus of infantile paralysis likes to live in a certain type of cells in the spinal cord, which it may damage; injury to these cell causes paralysis. How the virus injures its host cell is not known; it may kill the cell or it may, on the other hand, stimulate the cell to grow wildly; it may enter a human body and lie dormant there indefinitely, a silent infection. If the individual harbouring the virus transmits disease to others, without being ill himself, he is known as a carrier of the disease.
