VI. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below :

The roles of nature (what we inherit) and of nature (what we learn) in making us what we are have long been debated. Although nature may limit what we can achieve, socializing plays a very large role in determining what we do achieve. That is, whatever potential ability we inherit from our parents may be enhanced and restricted through socialization. Case studies of children who have not been cared for, and of children who have been stimulated to achieve at a high level, provide evidence for the importance of social and environmental learning.

Since the fourteenth century there have been more than fifty recorded cases of feral children. Feral children are the children who are brought up by the animals in the wild. One of the most famous is 'The wild boy of Aveyron'. In 1797, this boy was captured by hunters in the woods of South France. He was about 11 years old completely naked. The 'Wild boy' ran on his arms and legs, could not speak, and he liked uncooked food. He could not do most of the simple things that younger children can usually do. He was obviously deprived of socialization.

There have been similar stories of social deprivation in the present century too. Anna, for example, was born in 1932 in Pennsylvania. Her father was outraged by her birth and did not want anything to do with the child.

The mother tried to give Anna away, but could not. So she hide her in the attic and gave her just enough food to keep her alive. Anna was neither touched nor talked to, neither washed nor bathed. When she was found in 1938 at the age of six, Anna could not talk or walk. She could do nothing but lie quietly on the floor, her eyes and face expressionless.

Children who get little attention in orphanages suffer similar harmful effects. In 1945, researcher Rene Spitz reported on an orphanage where 18 months old infants were left lying on their backs in tiny rooms most of the day without any human contact. Within a year all had become physically, mentally, emotionally and socially impaired. Two years later, more than one third of the children had died – Those who had survived could not speak, walk, dress themselves or use a spoon.

- A) 1) What do the terms 'nature' and 'nurture' refer to ?
 2) What evidence do the case studies provide about social learning ?
 3) How many cases of feral children have been recorded so far ?
 4) Who are feral children ?
 5) Whom does the author mention as the most famous example of feral children ?
 6) What was the plight of Anna when she was found at the age of six ?

B) 7) Describe the problems faced by feral children using the example given in the passage.

(2×2=4)

VIII. Summarize the following passage. Your summary must have atleast four main points. Give a suitable title to the summary :

Today, travelling has become safer and more comfortable. We have many means of transport to go on tours or pilgrimages. Good roads increase in transport and lodging facilities have made travel pleasurable.

Now-a-day people undertake tours mainly for relaxation and pleasure. They visit places of historical importance or natural beauty. They visit waterfalls, beaches or hill stations to get refreshed and relieve their tension. On the other hand, pilgrimage is considered a religious duty. People visit temples to offer prayers or fulfil vows. The difference between a tour and pilgrimage is slowly disappearing and people turn a pilgrimage into a pleasurable tour.

Due to the increase in the public transport facilities, all sections of society can afford to travel. Railways, Roadways and Airways link all parts of the country and people can travel with ease and comfort if they plan their tour well in advance. There are many hotels and guest houses which provide food and lodging, tours help us to gather knowledge and experience in an enjoyable manner.
